Redefined Floor Plan

IMPROVING FUNCTIONALITY IN A MASTER BATHROOM

The LaFebres were baffled by an odd floor plan in their master bathroom. Just off of the 128-square-foot bath were five sets of hinged doors — one leading to the bedroom, two doors leading to the single closet, another to the toilet area and yet another to a linen closet. All these doors interrupted the flow of the small space and created headaches for the couple.

The LaFebres asked USI Remodeling to solve their spatial dilemma. USI Remodeling created a whole new floor plan and contemporary design style that boasts an open feel. The interior wall between the master bath and closet was reframed and angled, creating just one entry point into the closet. The linen closet was removed and a custom linen cabinet was added inside the master closet, opening up the bathroom space even more. The wall enclosing the toilet was reframed and a pocket door was added. Now, the room has an open space plan and only has two sets of swinging doors — one on the closet and one leading to the bedroom.

Not only does the room have a better functionality, but it was also updated with modern, decadent finishes and amenities. A DuPont Quartz counter complements the cherry vanity from Restoration Hardware's Turner Bath Collection. The Kohler-Archer soaking tub is surrounded by StonePeak Ceramics tile from American Tile Supply. The frameless glass shower adds to the open feel of the room.

Now the LaFebres can enjoy a relaxing, modern bathroom without dodging swinging doors.
